MM Engineering is a UK-based engineering specialist with over two decades experience in designing and creating steel-fabricated, bespoke products. Our specialist products service a wide variety of sectors including construction, petrochemical, security and flood defence.

We have strong international trade links and have exported products to all four of the world's continents, with our expertise in blast protection and large-scale flood defence projects of particular value to developing security and environmental conditions around the globe.

Our fundamental belief is that a secure defence can only be produced following a high-quality and exhaustive design process. We invest heavily in the research and design of our product range to provide industry-leading manufactured product to our customers.

The international demand for high security products grows every year. We have a range of products designed to meet the critical defence needs of our customers.

Flood Defence

We offer a comprehensive range of flood defence products for use in a range of commercial applications including construction projects.

Bespoke Range

Design is at the heart of what we do and we are continuously innovating and fabricating bespoke systems to meet our customers' needs across a range of sectors.

Global Export

We are proud British manufacturers and have supplied and installed products in all corners of the United Kingdom. The quality of our designs and products has gained an international reputation upon which we have entered markets around the globe. At present we have supplied products to over 30 countries, covering all four continents.

We are flexible to customer's needs and can create an overall package that suits the particular market conditions. This includes using trained partners in regions such as South East Asia and supplying direct to the end user.
